Observing and assessing children's development

Assessment is the way in which in our everyday practice, we observe children's learning, strive to understand it, and then put our understanding to good use. (Drummond, 1993) When we watch children, watch them carefully and sensitively, we see them learning.

Observing and assessing children's learning and development

For young children, their partners in learning about the world around them are their families and—when in early learning and care programs—their teachers. The California Department of Education is committed to ensuring every young child's optimal development and to supporting teachers and families as children's partners in learning.
